APPLICATION FOR A DISCRETIONARY APPEAL

Comes now the Defendant/Appellant, Robert D. Glover, in the above styled matter to grant him leave to file an application for a discretionary appeal on an order to revoke five (5) years of probation to be served in the State penal system. In support of this motion in accordance with O.C.G.A. 5-6-35 the Appellant shows the following:

A reversible error appears to exist. There was a delay of seven (7) months and ten (10) days between the petition for revocation of probation and the date of the hearing, for which Appellant did not receive credit. The Georgia Court of Appeals previously ruled that thirty (30) days is a reasonable time period between petition and final hearing. Appellant is seeking credit for the seven (7) months and ten (10) days spent in custody between the date of petition and date of hearing.

As is shown under the Account of Custodian of the Prisoners Personal History Sheet (Exhibit 1) the Appellant was arrested on 7/4/11 for Aggravated Stalking and Violation of Probation for the above case by Forsyth County. The Probation Officer presented the Appellant with the petition for probation revocation almost two months later, August 31, 2011 (Exhibit 2). The Appellant was heard and sentenced to five (5) years to serve with the balance to be expunged on 4/10/12 (Exhibits 1 and 3).

It is stated in the procedures for probation revocation hearings that, "The final hearing must be available to probationers within a reasonable time if he is in custody."
