Permission for Articles, Graphics and Mastheads

All staff articles, graphics and mastheads that appear in the AJC, on ajc.com and in our Stacks Web archive are copyrighted by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. They may not be reproduced, republished, retransmitted or redistributed without prior written permission.

Exceptions:

- You may reproduce up to five copies of an AJC staff article for personal use only. This does not include display or promotional use.
- You may email an AJC staff article to up to five individuals for personal use only. This does not include promotional use.
- Elementary, middle and high school teachers may reproduce an AJC staff article for classroom use only.
- You may link to an article on ajc.com. This does not include framing ajc.com within your site

Requests for permission to reprint staff articles, graphics or mastheads are handled by the Atlanta Journal-Constitution for the following uses:

- Promotional use in brochures, pamphlets, handouts
- Posting on a web site
- Public display
- Broadcast
- Set dressing

Submit your request:

- Electronically via our permission request form or permissions@ajc.com
- By mail on company or organization letterhead to The Stacks, Attention: Reprint Permissions, P.O. Box 4689, Atlanta, GA 30302.
- By fax to 404-526-2701, Attention: Reprint Permissions For additional details on submitting a request, call our AJC Permissions voicemail line 404-526-2615.

A Stacks representative will contact you within three business days. If granted, permission usually involves a fee, payable in advance. All fees are non-refundable.

The Copyright Clearance Center is authorized by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution to handle requests to:

- Republish or use staff articles in journals, magazines, newspapers, newsletters, dissertations, textbooks, tradebooks, CD-ROMs and DVDs
- Make photocopies for internal use within an organization or company
- Post articles on an intranet
- Distribute articles via email
- Make copies of articles for coursepacks to be sold to students or for use in electronic coursepacks.

Permission for Photos

All staff photos in the AJC or on ajc.com are copyrighted by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. We can only grant reprint permission for staff-produced photos that have been published in the AJC. Photos may not be used on the internet or for commercial or promotional purposes, unless they are used along with the story with which they originally appeared as part of a custom reprint product created by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution's authorized reprint provider, PARS.

Photos may not be used for advertising.

If the photo you request requires extensive research time, we charge a fee of $50 per half-hour. Photos can be faxed for review at no charge. Photos can also be emailed for review for a non-refundable $75 fee per photo.

Submit your request:

- Electronically via our permission request form or photopermissions@ajc.com
- By fax to 404-526-5862, Attention: Pam Prouty

If you would like to purchase a copy of an AJC photo for personal use only, please visit the YourPix page.
