Subject: 1994 & 1995 Caseload Statistics - Court of Appeals
Date: December 12, 1995

Attached please find a report I generated from information supplied by Bud Tirey for Ms. Lee Little and Ms. Holly Sparrow of the AOC. They are assisting the Court in preparing the Court's needs assessment to support the legislation for additional judges for this Court. In addition to the civil and criminal case filings for 1994 and 1995, I have attached a copy of the case classification report and a copy of the classifications as they are defined into the different subcategories of cases.

Attached also please find a report showing the number of discretionary applications filed and granted in domestic relations cases and workers compensation cases for 1993 and 1994.

Should you have any questions regarding this matter, I will be happy to discuss them with you.

Assessment of Need for the Addition of Judges Court of Appeals of Georgia

The Court of Appeals of Georgia has had nine judges since 1961, at which time its membership was increased from seven (Ga. Laws 1961, p.140 §1). It had been increased from six to seven in 1960 (Ga. Laws 1960, p.158 §1), and from its original three members (Ga. Laws 1906, p. 24 §3) to six in 1916 (Ga. Laws 1916, p. 56 §1). In the 34 intervening years since the last increase in judges, enormous changes have occurred in Georgia's judicial system which impact upon the workload of the Court. The number of trial court judges and caseloads of these courts has dramatically increased during that period.

In 1961, the superior court judges of this State numbered 56. Since that time, the number has tripled to 169. In addition to the 300% increase in the number of superior court judges in these last 34 years, caseload filed in these courts from 1973 (the earliest statewide data available) to 1993 increased by 141% from 125,731 to 303,304 cases.

Since most state courts were created by consolidation of several different types of courts in the 1970's and statewide statistics on the number of state and juvenile judgeships were not formally kept until 1971, it is difficult to reconstruct the actual number of judgeships that existed in 1961. In 1974 there were only 67 state court judges while in fiscal year 1995 there are 64 state courts operating in 65 counties with 90 authorized state court judgeships, 50 of which are full-time and 40 of which are part-time. This is an overall 34% increase.

There are currently 56 full-time and part-time juvenile court judges in the State, plus 32 associate juvenile court judges to assist the juvenile or superior court judges in handling cases. This is a 57% increase since 1975. In counties with no separate juvenile court judge, the superior court judges hear juvenile cases. Caseload has tripled in this class of courts from 24,940 to 100,177 just since 1973.

Also in the interim since 1961, the adoption of the current Georgia Constitution in 1982 (effective 1983) contained a substantially revised judicial article. It had a tremendous impact on the operation of the courts of the State of Georgia. Shortly after the adoption of the new state constitution, the justice of the peace system was replaced by more professionally trained and fully staffed magistrate courts in the State. Each Chief Magistrate may be assisted by one or more associate magistrates. There are now 159 chief magistrates and 321 associate magistrates. Although appeals from the magistrate courts do not come directly to the Court of Appeals, they do so indirectly, often as challenges to the issuance of warrants in criminal cases.

It is from the trial courts (superior, state, magistrate, and juvenile, as well as probate on occasion) that appeals ultimately come to the Court of Appeals, either directly or through application. The application process for certain direct appeals was instituted in 1979 (see OCGA §5-6-35, Ga. Laws 1979 p. 619 §§1-2) and prior to that time for interlocutory applications (see OCGA §5-6-34, Ga. Laws 1975 p.757 §1). The application caseload has grown accordingly, as shown by figures appended as Exhibit G.

Another significant aspect of the funnel through which cases reach the Court of Appeals is that the number of district attorneys has increased over the years. In 1961 the State's prosecutorial officers were designated solicitors general. Their modest salary was paid by the State and out of this salary they paid their secretaries and office expenses. Few solicitors general had State-paid assistants. Solicitors general were permitted to engage in private practice of law, which would have to be balanced with the prosecutorial obligations. By 1977 there were 42 full-time district attorneys; now there is one district attorney in each of the 46 judicial circuits. The number of assistant district attorneys and investigators has also increased dramatically. Each circuit now is entitled to a State-paid assistant district attorney for each superior court judge in the circuit and effective July 1, 1995, an additional State-funded district attorney was added to each judicial circuit so that the number of State-funded prosecuting officers in each judicial circuit equals the number of judges plus two. Additionally, many circuits have county-funded assistants to manage the prosecutorial workload.

The Prosecuting Attorneys Council reports there are currently 174 state-paid ADAs, 190 county-paid ADAs, 46 state-paid investigators, and 111 county-paid investigators.

Another factor to be considered is the increased number of law enforcement officers who make cases, a percentage of which will eventually end up in the Court of Appeals. More arrests lead to more convictions, which lead to more appeals. Over the past decade, arrests for index crimes<sup>1</sup> in Georgia have risen nearly 54%. Drug cases have added substantially to the Court's criminal caseload. Arrests on narcotics charges increased 77% from 1980 to 1993<sup>2</sup>.

Under recent criminal legislation, currently called "two strikes and you're out" (OCGA §17-10-6.1 and §17-10-7), the penalty for a second conviction of one of seven serious crimes is life without parole. It is anticipated that there will be no plea bargain to life without parole in the non-death penalty cases, over which the Court of Appeals has jurisdiction. It stands to reason that these cases will be tried and the defendants will appeal. In addition to the two strikes legislation, other mandatory sentencing acts in recent years probably result in more appeals. One such act is the School Safety and Juvenile Justice Reform Act of 1994, which gave jurisdiction to the superior court for juveniles 13 to 17 years of age for specific felonies. It also creates a new appeal of a decision by the superior court judge to transfer such a case back to juvenile court.

The number of inmates held in Georgia's correctional institutions also has bearing on the number of cases filed with the Court of Appeals. An increase in the number of convictions which result in incarcerations can be expected to yield more appeals of these convictions and sentences. Georgia's prison population (including prisons, county correctional institutions, and transition centers) has grown 375% from 6,985 in 1960 to 33,175 in 1994. At the end of 1994, Georgia ranked seventh in the nation in incarceration rates<sup>3</sup>. The number of prisoners in Georgia at the end of 1994 had increased over 20% above the previous year (ranking Georgia second nationally in terms of percent increase in inmates).

There is an increasing number of workers' compensation and other administrative agency appeals, which come to the Court of Appeals through the superior courts and sometimes, by default, from the Board of Workers' Compensation. Added to all of this is the increase in federal and state statutory regulation, as well as changes in the interpretation of the United States Constitution, all of which prompt more appeals. On the horizon is the Federal Courts Long Range Plan for shifting vast amounts of jurisdiction to state courts.

All of these factors contribute to the caseload and the workload of the Court of Appeals of Georgia. According to the latest comparative figures from the National Center for State Courts, Georgia is the busiest state appellate court in the country based on signed opinions per judge. In 1993, the Court of Appeals of Georgia averaged 278 signed opinions per judge, more than double those of the next nearest state, which was California, at 137 signed opinions per judge. If the number of judges on Georgia's Court of Appeals were increased to 13, and the total number of opinions remained the same, the average number of signed opinions per judge would be 192, still greater than California's number of opinions per judge. To reduce Georgia's signed opinions to match California's per judge level, Georgia would need 18 judges. The 1993 comparative figures from the National Center for State Courts are the latest figures available. The 1994 figures will not be available until next summer.

The attached Graph 1 shows the continued growth in the number of filings with the Georgia Court of Appeals from 1985 through 1994. Based on these filings, the number of future filings can be projected. The right half of the graph depicts two projected growth rates for filings in the Court of Appeals, one high, the other low. As can be seen, regardless of which projection is used, the Court of Appeals can expect continued substantial growth in filings through the middle of the next decade.

Attached are several exhibits which will demonstrate the workload of the Court of Appeals of Georgia and illustrate the increased number of trial court judges. The information for Exhibits B through F is drawn from State Court Caseload Statistics 1993, National Center for State Courts, Williamsburg, Virginia, Table 6, pp. 132-135.

Exhibit A shows the increase in the number of superior court judgeships in Georgia from 1961 through 1995. Figures reflect the number of authorized superior court judgeships.

Exhibit B is a listing of the number of signed opinions per judge for the state intermediate appellate courts for 1993.

Exhibit C is an alphabetical listing by state of the number of signed opinions and signed opinions per judge for all states with intermediate appellate courts for 1993.

Exhibit D lists the number of signed opinions and signed opinions per judge for states with multiple intermediate appellate courts in 1993.

Exhibit E lists in descending order the number of signed opinions, number of judges, and number of signed opinions per judge for the southern region.

Exhibit F is a listing of filings per judge for mandatory cases in states with one intermediate appellate court for 1993.

Exhibit G is a caseload summary of the Court of Appeals of Georgia, 1985-1995.

Another important contributing factor affecting the Court of Appeals of Georgia, as well as the entire judiciary of the State, is the tremendous population growth of the State. Georgia is a vibrant state with a strong economy and progressive leadership which has made the state attractive to businesses and people from around the nation and around the world. With the recognition of Georgia's many attractive and positive attributes comes an increase in population and resultant litigation and prosecutions which will continue into the next century.

Exhibit H shows Georgia's population growth since 1960. In 1960, the State's population was 3.9 million. The 1990 census population for Georgia was 6.5 million. The present estimated population is 7 million. Projected population for the year 2000 is 7.7 million and 8.7 million for the year 2010. The projected estimates for 2000 and 2010 are based on birthrates for the mid-1980's. In actuality, birthrates for 1990 have been higher than the projected estimates, so the projections for 2000 and 2010 are likely to be conservatively low. (See also Graph 2).

As might be expected given the sharp rise in population, the number of domestic relations cases in Georgia's courts has increased also. Although domestic relations cases generally reach the Court of Appeals in the form of discretionary petitions rather than direct appeals, increases in those types of domestic relations cases over which the Court has jurisdiction will increase due to higher numbers of family dissolutions.

Along with Georgia's population growth has been substantial commerce and business growth. Graph 3 illustrates some aspects of this growth. The number of business establishments in 1992 was 163,330, which was up 197% over the 1960 count of 55,019<sup>4</sup>. The number of new business incorporations grew at an even higher rate (599%) over the same time period<sup>5</sup>. While business development has grown substantially, the number of business failures have also increased, rising 1,167% from 227 in 1960 to 2,877 in 1992<sup>6</sup>. These increases will likely yield increases in commercial litigation, which in turn have resulted in more appeals.

Georgia's increasing population and growth as a prominent commercial center have also spurred increased transportation, as is reflected in Graph 4. Georgia has built more highways, increasing its highway mileage (as of 1994) by over 14% above the total in 1960<sup>7</sup>. In addition, motor vehicle registrations have increased 334% (from 1,510,720 in 1960 to 6,556,500 in 1993)<sup>8</sup>. Unfortunately, the number of motor vehicle accidents has grown at roughly the same rate as well (324% over the same time period)<sup>9</sup>. The personal injury and property claims resulting from such accidents are likely to continue to lead to more litigation and appeals.

In conclusion, it should be noted that "[s]cholars have estimated that an appellate court should not be called upon to handle more than 100 cases on the merits per judge per year"<sup>10</sup>.

Information on the opinion reports for Idaho was not available. Pennsylvania and Oklahoma data is incomplete. Last year, California ranked second behind Georgia with 133 signed opinions per judge. Nebraska and North Carolina tied at fifteenth with 82 signed opinions per judge. This information comes from the 1993 State Court Caseload Statistics Report for the National Center for State Courts, Table 6, page 132, opinions reported by state appellate courts, 1993, signed opinions. This exhibit does not purport to explain the structural organization of other appellate courts listed in this report, but is merely a summary comparison of the number of signed opinions issued per intermediate appellate court per judge on that court for 1993.

Memorandum

To: Mr. Lee Little, Administrative Office of The Courts
WJ Little

From: Bill Martin

Subject: Case Type Filing Report - 1994 & 1995 - Court of Appeals of Georgia

Date: December 4, 1995

Attached please find the figures for the Court of Appeals which we discussed in our telephone conversation on December 4, 1995. As I stated in that conversation, the number of misdemeanors listed for 1994 and 1995 will be the minimum numbers. Currently, we are unable to determine by our computerized docketing system whether a theft case filed was a felony or a misdemeanor. Generally, most of the cases appealed to the Court of Appeals are felonies. However, involuntary manslaughter, obstruction of an officer, theft cases, VGCSA cases, fraud cases, and possibly others can be either felony or misdemeanor.

Also, as I discussed, the number of applications for 1995 seems lower than previous years, but that is because of the fact that the Court changed the docketing year during 1995.

Direct appeals operate on a docketing year of September 15 through September 15. In the past, the applications had been docketed on a calendar year, from January 1 through December 31. In an effort to have the docketing year for applications and direct appeals end at the same time, we have basically only nine and a half months of applications docketed in 1995. A truer figure for the Court's activity in applications for 1995 would be to factor in the number of applications that would proportionately have been filed throughout the year that were filed in the first nine and a half months.

Thank you again for all of the hard work that you and Holley are doing in helping the Court of Appeals prepare this report. Should you have need of further information or if I can be of assistance to you, please do not hesitate to contact me.

To: BUD TIREY
W. H. MARTIN

From: BILL MARTIN

Subject: CASELOAD REPORT FOR 1994 - 1995

Date: November 2, 1995

The following is a list of criminal classifications grouped into various categories. Please use the classifications to generate a report showing the number of cases in each category filed with the Court in 1994 and 1995. Please let me know if I have left off classifications or if additional classifications have been added. Thank you.

The following are felonies: 01500; 01501; 01502; 01503; 01504; 01506; 01507; 01508; 01509; 01510; 01513; 01514; 01516; 01519; 01525; 01530; 01533; 01534; 01537; 01538; 01540; 01541; 01542; 01545; 01552; 01553; 01554; 01555; 01558; 01560; 01562; 01563; 01566; 01568; 01569; 01572; 01578; 01579; 01580; 01583; 01584; 01585; 01587; 01588; 01589; 01591; 01593; 01595; 01599; 01601; 01602; 01603; 01610; 01611; 01616; 01618; 01619; 01620; 01624; 01630; 01631; 01632; 01633; 01635; 01637; 01641; 01648; 01651; 01653; 01654; 01655; 01656; 01660

Memorandum

To: Presiding Judge Birdsong
From: WSM
Bill Martin
Subject: Certiorari Applications for First, Second and Third Divisions, 1995.

---

Attached please find the figures generated by Bud Tirey for the total number of cert applications for 1995 cases broken down by division. The list shows the individual cases and their status in the Supreme Court. At the end of the list is the total number of applications for certiorari filed, the total number granted, the total number denied and the total number of applications pending.

Of the applications granted, all dispositions are pending. In other words, the Supreme Court has not affirmed or reversed on any granted 1995 application.

If you would like information concerning 1994 applications or prior years, Bud Tirey has indicated that he can provide this information for you.

Court of Appeals

Memorandum

To: Judge Johnson
From: Bill Martin
Subject: Caseload Statistics
Date: October 2, 1995

In 1994 there was a total of 2842 direct appeals filed, 611 discretionary applications filed and 458 interlocutory applications filed. The total filings were 3911 or an average of 434 cases per judge. If there were 12 judges on the Court the average would be 326 cases per judge.

In 1995 there were 2884 direct appeals filed, 421 discretionary applications and 330 interlocutory applications filed. The total number of cases filed in 1995 were 3635 for an average of 404 cases per judge. With 12 judges on the Court the average would be 303 cases per judge.

A truer figure for 1995 filings would be 2884 direct appeals, 532 discretionary appeals and 419 interlocutory appeals for a total of 3835.

This total prorates the applications over a twelve month period as opposed to the 9 1/2 months of actual filings we counted in 1995 due to the fact that the Court changed to a docket year for the applications as opposed to a calendar year as it has been in the past.

The average number of cases per judge with a total of 3835 cases is 426. With 12 judges on this Court the average number of cases per judge would be 320.

The average number of direct appeals with a nine judge court for 1995 is 320 cases. With a 12 judge court that average would go to 240 cases per judge.

In 1994 there were 2842 direct appeals filed averaging 315 direct appeals per judge. With a 12 judge court the number of direct appeals per judge would be 237.

Subject: Comparative statistics re ~~caseload~~

Date: September 12, 1995

"In both 1987 and 1993, the number of appeals per judge~~s~~ was greater in Michigan than in any other state." Roger A. Hanson, "Procedural Innovations for Appellate Courts: A Synthesis of Two National Workshops," NCSC, 1995. Compare this, however, with Georgia's caseload and method of disposition, as reported in the NCSC State Court Caseload Statistics, 1993:<sup>1</sup>

Georgia - 2501 total dispositions in 1993 by signed opinion.

9 judges (278 per judge)

Michigan - 331 total dispositions in 1993 by signed opinion.

24 judges (14 per judge)

Georgia - 2601 mandatory cases filed (direct appeals)

289 per judge

Michigan - 12,494 mandatory cases filed

520 per judge

<sup>1</sup> Pages 132-133, 106, 108.

Total Dispositions by signed opinion in Georgia:

1992 - Supreme Court - 350

Court of Appeals - 2065 (229 per judge)

1993 - Supreme Court - 316

Court of Appeals - 2501 (278 per judge)

Enclosed please find some of the comparative ~~caseload~~ statistics, as compiled by the National Center for State Courts, showing the Georgia Court of Appeals as it ranks with other intermediate appellate courts in the country. Additionally, I have enclosed a chart which shows how the number of trial court judges have increased since 1961, the year in which the Court of Appeals was increased from 7 judges to 9 judges.

Earlier I had left with Christy some budget figures and a letter from Commissioner Dave Evans which Chief Judge Beasley wanted you to have. On behalf of the Court, I want to thank you and the Governor for your interest in the Court of Appeals of Georgia. If I can provide you with other information or otherwise be of assistance to you or the Governor's Office, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely yours,

Memorandum

To: Chief Judge Beasley
From: Bill Martin
Subject: Caseload Report
Date: August 25, 1995

In response to your memorandum of August 23, 1995, I shall defer to Bud's expertise on question number one, but I believe that the information is available on our systems.

As to your second question as to why this differs from what is published in the AOC Annual Report on the Workload of the Courts, I suspect it is a different format to emphasize the some of the activity of the Court to enhance their figures and totals. Also, it tends to break the information down by jurisdictional categories.

In answer to your third question, I do not believe that such report would be of much use or benefit to this Court. The filing, dispositions and written opinions of this Court are such that there is no need to emphasize or amplify the numbers. I believe they adequately speak for themselves.

It is my impression that the information that we are furnishing to the National Center for State Courts is in a format that they can easily use. However, if you would like, I can contact the National Center for State Courts and ask if any changes in our reporting format would be helpful to them.

From: DOROTHY T. BEASLEY DTB

Subject: Caseload report

With respect to Bill Martin's memo of August 17 to me regarding the caseload report published by the Supreme Court of Georgia, a copy of which was attached, the question is whether any action is desirable. You will recall that at the August 15 banc meeting, at the end of your Technology report, we asked that you recommend whether we should produce a similar report.

1. Is the same type of information available on our computer system now, with respect to our cases?
2. Why does this differ from what is published in the AOC Annual Report on the Workload of the Courts?
3. Of what use would it be to have such a report for the Court of Appeals, as opposed to what we are now publishing? Bill and/or Judge Johnson may have some suggestions in this regard.
4. Is what we are publishing what is requested by the National Center for State Courts, or does it want a more expanded report for its annual national case-counting project?

Thank you!

At the Banc Meeting on August 15, 1995, there was some discussion regarding the caseload report which was published by the Supreme Court of Georgia. I spoke with Sherie Welch and she stated that the information was obtained from Bud Tirey, but was rearranged in a format that dealt with the caseload by subject matter and jurisdiction.

If you would like to discuss this report, please let me know.

Memorandum

To: Judge Blackburn
From: WJ Martin Bill Martin
Subject: Percent of Cases on for Oral Argument
Date: May 15, 1995

Last week you requested the figures on the number of cases which were orally argued before the Court. I have checked through the bench docket for 1994 and have listed the number of cases in which oral argument was requested and oral argument was actually heard, broken down by the month.

The number of oral arguments requested was 1020 which is 35% of the 2895 direct appeals which were filed in 1994. The actual number of oral arguments heard was 888 which is 31% of the direct appeals filed.

If you would like, I can get you the information for 1993 and previous years as well.

Attached please find the listings for the oral arguments requested and heard by month.

<sup>1</sup>The requests for oral argument will be taken to Central Staff for screening and recommendation and then directly to assigned Judge and panel to make decision.

<sup>2</sup>April 4 - May 10: Five weeks, after appellant's brief and E/E comes, for Court to decide whether oral argument. [Central Staff screens. If one Judge wants OA, do it. Unanimity by courtesy.]
 April 24-May 10: Almost three weeks, after appellee brief comes, for Court to decide whether oral argument.
 Case could be added to printed OA calendar, as is done now, by order for out-of-time requests or rescheduling).
